

About the differences of institutions from universities

Often, the choice of educational institutions, even the parents of the young man, future student, I do not quite understand the difference between them. Can be long to read Wikipedia, to seek explanations from knowledgeable either guess yourself, but we try to present a concise and accessible explanation for anyone interested.

Nowadays educational institutions called not only the two main popular terms, there are also academies, high schools, etc. etc. But nobody knows what the essence of their differences. The main provisions not going to enumerate, they are in the act for determining the status of the institution, but the core of the University are the number of graduate students, 4 or more per 100 students, most professors are required to have advanced degrees, innovative methods and approaches on an ongoing basis, research on all branches existing in the University.

With regard to the institution, for a quantity of 100 students and 1 PhD student, funding in small amounts for research, fewer academic titles of professors, certain positive results of delivery or the protection of its students, the Institute could become an Academy more info here.

But the General rule as to the Institute and University is a training, retraining, training of employees and constant research.

The University must reaffirm its accreditation every 5 years, so often we hear about the change in name of an educational institution. Of course, an accreditation certificate is issued by the Ministry of education. There are a number of rules that must comply with the school that one is attending conferences, seeing the open door and the constant set of training in various forms.

And now a little bit easier. Naturally, prices are a visible difference, but at the moment, in order to match its status, a school must constantly prove their status. So when talking about choice, people often pay attention to tested and well-known places. The second category bases its selection on the finances. Therefore, for me to tell no one. Find what you like!
